

Harvard Reference examples

The Harvard referencing system is the most frequently used style at Staffordshire and is also known as the Author-Date style. It emphasises the name of the creator of a piece of information and the date of publication, with the list of references in alphabetical order at the end of your piece of work.

A few subject areas use a different style of referencing, so you should check your module handbook for confirmation of what style is required by your tutor for a particular assignment.

This guide provides examples of how a wide range of information sources should be referenced according to the Harvard style, including the order of the elements and punctuation used. For each source there are examples of how to cite within the text and how to write your list of references.

If you cannot find the type of information you wish to reference included in this document please contact us at ask@staffs.ac.uk.

Punctuation and capitalisation when using Harvard

The recommended University style suggests that you should use capitals for authors' names within your bibliography but, if you decide to use upper and lower case within the authors' names instead, you will not be marked down for this as long as you are consistent in the style you use.

Likewise, Staffordshire's recommended version of Harvard does not stipulate specific styles of punctuation – rather it suggests a style to which you can adhere but, if you prefer not to use the recommended punctuation as shown in this guide, you will not be marked down as long as you are consistent in what you do.

Citing two or more authors at the same time

When citing two or more authors at the same time you should list the authors in date order within the parenthesis with the earliest date first and with each reference separated by a semi-colon. For example: (Smith, 2001; Brown & Black, 2007) or (Fish, 2001; Campbell 2008; Wilson, 2012). Once again there is no official Harvard standard for citing multiple authors, but the style suggested here is the one that is normally used.

(Chicken Run, 2000)

...this is highlighted by Harry's character in the film Requiem for a Dream (2000).

Foreign language books

If you are referencing a book in a foreign language, there are two ways to do it.

Either:

1. Give the title exactly as it appears in the book or article.
e.g. REMARQUE, E. M. (1974) Im Westen nichts Neues. Berlin: Ullstein

Or:

2. Provide the English translation of the title, together with details of the language the book or article was originally written in.
e.g. REMARQUE, E.M. (1974) All Quiet on the Western Front (in German). Berlin: Ullstein.

It does not matter which of these methods you choose - the important thing is to be consistent and use the same one throughout your research.

The format used is the same as for English language books, including multiple authors or edited books. See the appropriate Books section of this guide for information on how to reference these.

Quoting foreign language books

In text examples are given in the same format as for English language books:

(Remarque, 1974)

As suggested by Remarque (1974)...

When quoting from a foreign language work in the main body of the text, the quotation should always be provided in English. The item should then be referenced in your bibliography using the format above.

Foreign language books – translations

When referencing a foreign language item which has been translated, use the following format:

REMARQUE, E. M. (1996) All Quiet on the Western Front. Translated from the German by B. Murdoch. London: Vintage.

S

Secondary Referencing using Harvard

What is Secondary Referencing?

Secondary referencing occurs when a book or journal article uses facts or information from research done by someone else, and you want to use this information to support your own assignment.

How to Secondary Reference

There are two ways you can approach a secondary reference:

1. You locate the original research so that you can read, use and cite directly from this. This is often the preferred method as this shows that you have widened the research for your own assignment.
2. In some instances this may not be possible as the original research may be difficult to find or gain access to. If you are confident that the secondary source is reliable and accurate you can refer to it in your own work using the Harvard rules for secondary referencing (see below for examples).

In-text example:

You have read the book 'Modern Organisations' by Bill Jones (2007) and within this he refers to another author, Jean Smith, and her ideas of 'organisational devolution' (1987). You want to include Smith's ideas within your assignment. To do this using the Harvard system your citation must indicate that you have used a secondary source and not the original work undertaken by Smith:

Jean Smith (1987), as summarized by Jones (2007) highlights the application of 'organisational devolution'...

Or

Smith's (1987) 'organisational devolution' indicates this possibility (Jones, 2007, p. 45).

Bibliography example:

When using the Harvard system in terms of secondary referencing your bibliography only needs to give the details of the source that you have read for the assignment. Using the example above, you would refer to the main text as:

JONES, B. (2007) Modern Organisations. London: Routledge.

Sound recording – audio CD, Cassette, Vinyl Records

Format:

FAMILY/SURNAME, initials. (Year of publication - in brackets) Title - in italics or underlined [Material type—in square brackets]. Place of Distribution: Distribution Company.
